Summary of Legislation: This bill changes population parameters in various statutes to reflect the population count determined under the 2000 decennial census. The bill redefines the term "population" as used in Indiana statutes. It revises statutes to reflect the loss of one congressional seat after the 2000 federal decennial census. The bill also repeals a statute that provides that a special census or special tabulation may not take effect during the period beginning when the result of a decennial census is reported to the governor and the first date precinct establishment orders may become effective. (The introduced version of this bill was prepared by the census data advisory committee.)

Effective Date: Upon passage; January 1, 2002 (retroactive); April 1, 2002; July 1, 2002.
